

A Study on Unani Medicinal Plants-III (Zarnab)

S. J. Hussain ¹, T. N. Srivastava ² and N. N. Pathak ³.

Received on May 10th; 1978

In the present study investigation the authors have established the identity of Zarnab which is extensively used in Unani system of medicine for a number of ailments causing human suffering. The various plants which are referred in the literature under the name Zarnab have been compared morphologically, chemically, pharmacologically and medicinally with the ancient literature of Unani system of medicine and the botanical source of actual and genuine Zarnab is proposed as Rhododendron anthopogon D. Don.
