CAKRAPĀÑIDATTA

P. K. J. P. SUBHAKTHA*

ABSTRACT

Chakrapanidatta was a famous commentator, compiler, and physician. He belonged to a noble vaidya family. Chakrapanidatta was one of the brightest among the luminaries of India during the eleventh century. Chakrapanidatta stands as a milestone in the field of writing commentaries on the texts of Ayurveda, which earned for him the three most valuable titles ever achieved by an Ayurvedic physician, viz. Charaka Chaturanana, Sushruta Sahasranayana and Mahamahopadhyaya.

His skill lies in his capacity for presenting the difficult texts in simplest possible forms. Chakrapanidatta was the first to incorporate metallic recipes in Ayurvedic treatment which also deserves appreciation. He earned the fame very early in life and amassed so much wealth that till recently his descendants lived as big Zamindars.

INTRODUCTION:

Cakrapānīdattā, a famous Ayurvedic physician, commentator and compiler, who flourished during 11th century A.D. is called 'Caraka Caturānana' for his 'Ayurveda Dipikā' commentary on Caraka Samhitā which is an invaluable work and a treasure of Ayurvedic heritage and wisdom. Apart from this, many other important works on Ayurveda viz, Bānumati commentary on Suṣruti Samhitā, Cakradatta or Cikitsāśāra Sangraha, Muktāvali, Dravyagupta Sangraha, and Vyāgradaridra Subhaṅkara etc. are also to his credit. He stands as a milestone in the history of Ayurveda. Since the days of Agnivesa, who was the first to write a comprehensive treatise entitled 'Agnivesa Samhitā' on Ayurveda from the view point of the school of physicians, the metallic preparations were not in much use for the treatment of various diseases. Cakrapānīdattā who came out for more and more usage of the alchemical medicines and inclusion of Rasaparpari and Tāmrayoga is very valuable contribution made by him towards enrichment of Ayurveda. Thus he proved himself to be a physician of an exceptional genius in the history of Ayurveda.

HIS PARENTAGE AND PLACE OF BIRTH:

Cakrapāṇidatta was an inhabitant of Moureshwar, a village in the district of Bribhum in the sub-division of Rampurhat of Bengal. Moureshwar is just six miles away from Ekachakranagari where the five Pāṇidavas are believed to have spent a part of their exile period. This place was mostly inhabited by the famous brahmaṇas and vaidyas. His family was one of the very highly cultured families of Bengal. Cakrapāṇidatta was the younger brother of ‘Bhanudatta’ who was the commander-in-chief of the Bengal. According to an account given by Cakrapāṇidatta about himself in his book ‘Chikitsāsāra Saṅgraha,’ he was the younger brother of Bhanudatta and son of Narayana-datta coming from a kulin family of Lodhravali.1 Narayananadatta was the kitchen superintendent of the King Nayapāla of Gouda. Narayananadatta was also a great physician of exceptional merit and his services were requisitioned by King Nayapāla very often.

HIS PRECEPTOR:

Cakrapāṇidatta explains in his commentary on Caraka Samhitā named Ayurveda Dipikā that, he was a pupil of Naradatta, a famous physician of that time.

"Naradatta guruuddhīṣṭa carakārthārthānugrāminī Kriyate Cakradattena ċikāyurvedadipikā".

Cakrapāṇidatta has acknowledged that, his guru had given him necessary guidance in writing the Ayurveda Dipikā commentary, which has immortalised his name in the history of Ayurveda.

HIS DATE:

Since historians have fixed Nayapāla’s time between 1040-1070 A.D. the period of Cakrapāṇidatta may be fixed conveniently in the middle of the 11th century. Chronologically Cakrapāṇidatta is posterior to Vṛnda Madhava, because Cakrapāṇidatta in his work Cikitsāsāra Saṅgraha has referred to ‘Siddhayoga’ the work of Vṛnda Madhava, Cakrapāṇidatta is mentioned by Dalhana in his Nibandha Saṅgraha (p.1653).

"Pancamūli Mahatīti Candrikākāraḥ Swalpeti Cakrapāṇī".

So he is anterior to Dalhāna, who lived in the last quarter of 12th century A.D. Cakrapāṇidatta must not be confounded with another author of later date Cakrapānidāsa, the author of 'Abhinava Cintāmani'.

1. Colophon in Chakradatta or Chikitsasara Saṅgraha and at the end of his Ayurvedadipikā commentary of Caraka Samhitā, Siddhisthana. ‘Goudadhinath Rasvatyadhikaripatra Narayanasya tanayahasunayaantarangat Bhanoranu prathita Lodhravali Kulinaha Sri chakrapanirhat karttrapadadhikari.’

HIS RELIGION AND PHILOSOPHY:

Cakrapānidatta was a great devotee of Lord Śiva. He built a temple of 'Cakrapāneswar' in Moureshwar in the district of Bribhum. Still it is there in dilapidated condition. Cakrapānidatta has handled Ayurveda with a philosophical attitude. He had a profound knowledge of Hindu philosophy which reflects in almost all his works. Just as many scholars of that time, he too was influenced by Buddhism. His writings prove that, Buddhism had considerable impact on him and being a true philosopher and scholar he had deep respect for philosophy of Buddhism. Moreover his father was an employee of the successor of the great Buddhist King Nayapāla of Gouda. He mentions many Buddhist terms and places in describing medicinal formulae. He used the names Mahābodhipradeśa, Magadha, Bodhi Satyena Bhāsitham, Sukhavali varti, Sougatam, Anjanam. Thus we see that he named some of his formulations in Buddhistic terms.

THE WORKS OF CAKRAPĀNIDATTA:

1. Cikitsā-Sāra-Sangraha or Cakradatta:

   Cikitsāsāra sangraha or Cakradatta as it is popularly known as important from another viewpoint as it is in short a compass of all the important samhitās of. Caraka, Sūrūtra and Vāgbhaṭa. He has also blended in his ownself all the different schools of thought prevailed in India since time immemorial right upto his time. In this book Cakrapānidatta presented the knowledge of the school of Ātreya, school of Dhanvantari, and the school of Agastya, proving that he was voracious reader of the contemporary literature of Ayurveda. Cakrapānidatta has prescribed very successful and tested medicines for the treatment of all diseases. Even a junior physician who has gone through the Cikitsāsāra sangraha of Cakrapānidatta can boldly face any disease with his head erect. One of the secrets of the success of the Bengali Vaidyas is, their absolute mastery of Cakradatta.

   The herbal medicines prescribed by Cakrapānidatta are very powerful. In order to achieve the desired results in usage of his herbal medicines one has also to be able to understand the spirit in which Cakrapānidatta has prescribed them. For the composition of the Cikitsāsāra sangraha or Cakradatta, Cakrapāni also grew the Sidhayogas from the three great works viz. Caraka Samhitā Sūrūtra Samhitā and Āṣṭāṅga Hṛdaya. Śivadāsa Sen is prominent among the scholars who wrote commentary on Cakradatta.
or Cikitsāsāra sangraha. During the whole of the 19th century and right up to the first quarter of the 20th century, Cakradatta exerted the greatest possible influence on the physicians of Bengal. In the beginning of the 19th century right up to the 20th century as many as seven different editions of Cakradatta have appeared. They were edited by different prominent physicians. Several publication houses have also published Cakradatta Samhitā with Tattva Candrikā commentary of Śivadāsa Sen. But no new edition of Cakradatta has been published in the second half of the 20th century.

EDITIONS OF THE CAKRADATTA:

1. Cakradatta with Tattva-Candrikā. Published by Kavirāja Abhayānanda Gupta, Calcutta.

2. Cakradatta or Cikitsāsāra Sangraha with Tikā by Śivadāsa Sen. Printed and published by Benimādhav Dey & Co.

5. Cakradatta with Tattva-Candrikā and Bengali translation by Jasodha Nandan Sirkar, Calcutta.

6. Cakradatta with Tattva-Candrikā. Edited by Saśibhuṣan Kavirajan, Published by Jādvanātha Benerji, Calcutta.

7. Cakradatta with Tattva-Candrikā and Bengali translation. Published by Kavirāja Devendranātha Sen and Upendranātha Sen, Calcutta.

In Tattva-Candrikā Śivadāsa Sen admits his work is based on another commentary Ratna Prabhā, which he abridged. The Ratna Prabhā commentary was written by Niścalakara, which is not available now-a-days.

In Cakradatta the author Cakrapāṇidatta has mentioned about 20 authors and books. We know their names since they have been quoted by him. Some of those books were certainly in existence during the time of Cakradatta. The authors and books quoted by Cakrapāṇidatta are as follows:

1. Trinetra
2. Vāgbhaṭa
3. Caraka
4. Suśruta
5. Bhāluki Tantra
6. Sidhistāna
7. Viṣṇu
8. Kṛṣṇatreyā
9. Kāṅkāyana
10. Manibhadra
11. Bodhisatra
12. Bhāskara
13. Asirus
14. Nagarjuna
15. Kaśyapa
16. Cyavana
17. Siddhayoga
18. Brahma
19. Vairarana
20. Tārā

2. Ayurveda Dīpiκā:

This is his commentary on the Caraka Saṃhitā. Though Cakrapāṇidatta admits, that his work is based mainly on the work of his preceptor Naradatta, with his inner vision of a poetic genius and the analytical spirit of a scholar of science he has given it a stamp of originality. It gives the reader a very wide and comprehensive knowledge of Ayurveda. Cakrapāṇidatta quoted about fifty authors and books of Ayurveda extensively in this commentary. But it is very unfortunate that all these authors are lost into oblivion. The authors and books quoted as authorities by Cakrapāṇidatta in Ayurveda dipiκā are as follows:

3. Bhānumati:

This is a commentary written by Cakrapāṇidatta on Suśruta Saṃhitā, which is also called Suśrutatātparyatikā. This is regarded as a monumental work done by Cakrapāṇi. The whole manuscript was in existence in the famous library of Banaras Sanskrit College.4 But a British Indologist has taken it to England and there after its whereabouts are not known. Bhānumati was containing a rich information about the anatomical knowledge of the ancient Hindus.

4. Muktāvali:

This is yet another important work by Cakrapāṇi. It is a dictionary of Ayurveda dealing with the nature and properties of medicinal drugs.

5. Dravyagūṇa Caudrikā or Dravyagūṇa Sangrahā:

It deals with the properties of all the drugs mentioned in Caraka, Suśruta and Vāgbhata. This work is also called as Cakradatta. Anupāṇa, Dinacarya and Rūcārya also find place in it. Śivadāsa Sen has written a commentary on this book also.

6. Śabdacandrikā:

This is a vocabulary of vegetable and mineral substances and also a list of animals and a chapter on compounds of both medicine and diet.

7. Vyāgra-Daridra-Śubhankara:

It is an Ayurvedic compendium for the everyday use of the poor and young vaidyas having small income.

चक्रपाणिदत

चक्रपाणिदत एक सुप्रसिद्ध टीकाकार, संग्रहकार तथा चिकित्सक थे। वह एक बहुत ही उल्लेखनीय वैद्य कुल के सदस्य थे। वे शती ईसवी में भारत के सुप्रसिद्ध व्यक्तियों में इनकी गणना होती थी। अयुर्वेदीय मूल ग्रन्थों पर टीकाओं की रचना के क्षेत्र में चक्रपाणिदत मोह के पत्थर के समान हैं। यहाँ कारण है कि इन्होंने चर्चा-चतुरानन, सुधृत सहस्रनाथन तथा महामहोपाध्याय जैसी तीन महत्वपूर्ण उपाधियों से सम्मानित किया गया। ऐसा सम्मान इनके अतिरिक्त किसी और वैद्य को कभी नहीं मिला। कठिन मूल ग्रन्थों को बल्लत्त सरल रूप में प्रस्तुत करने की इनकी कुशलता इनके सामर्थ्य की छोटक है। अयुर्वेदीय चिकित्सा में रसोधियों को संवेदनात्मक चक्रपाणिदत ने सरस्वतित किया अत: वह प्रशस्त के पात्र हैं। इन्होंने अपने जीवन में बहुत शोध ही यश प्राप्त कर लिया तथा इतना अधिक धन अर्जित कर लिया कि इनके वंशज कुल समय पूर्व तक बड़े जमींदारों को तरह रहते थे।
